As this column is random, the sorting order applied to the first column will be completely random. The first column now contains a list of unique numbers in random order. The Rand & Randbetween functions are volatile, it is important to note that the Rand and Randbetween functions are volatile. This means that they recalculate every time Excel calculates regardless of any formula dependencies. Therefore, each cell that contains a random function will generate a new random number whenever you make a change in the workbook. This includes the type application to the range. To avoid this, we can copy/glue values in the column of random numbers after copying the formula. Sort names or text in random order, this same technique can be used to sort lists of names or text in random order. In the following example, we have a list of names in alphabetical order. We can add random numbers in the column B using the RAND function and then sort the range by column B. This will put the names in column B in random order. I'd like my teachers to know that when I was at school. With the surname of Acampora, I always had to sit in the first row of the classroom and I was chosen first for classroom presentations ... Scopicä had a great suggestion to create a list of random numbers when you don't need to include all the range numbers. For example, let's say we need a list of 100 random numbers between 1 and 1,000. His suggestion was to use the Randbetween function to create a long list of random numbers. Å Fill the formula for over 100 cells. Then copy/collate values. Then use the Remove duplicates feature to remove the possible duplicates generated byThis will leave us with a long list of numbers. We can then delete extra cells we don't need. Maybe Oz can create one of your impressive Excel on Fire Youtube videos to explain this technique with more details. What methods do you use to create random number lists? Please leave a comment below with any suggestions or questions. Thank you!
